The Story of General Charles Jan

From the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. An individual claiming the high-sounding name of General Charles James Lee Cooke, "of the Cuban army," has been in Texas working upon the credulity of the unsophisticated Long Horns. He managed to work himself into print by giving a reporter of the Galveston butcher. And when he left Galveston caused to be circulated the report that he was en route for Washington to confer with the State Department regarding the Cuban affairs.

But it seems that before calling on Secretary Fish he dropped in on San Antonio, and for certain little idiosynmay be accepted as competent to prove the same of The General' found it congenial to leave Texas for the North-in finding a cause for his haste, one should

Sr. Louis, March 8.—General Pope passed through this city yesterday en route for Washington, whither he was leave to notify you of the death of (as his papers show him to be a citizen of your city) General Charles James Lee Cooke formerly of the Cuban army.

P. 8.—I am from Dallas, Texas.

If the letter does not satisfactorily show that "the General" was a fraud, it shows that G. R.—George Robbins, (or grand rascal) was, and as Robbids and Gooke are pronounced by the Express to be one and the same person, the result is the same either way. The presult is the same either way. The presult is the same either way. The pre-sumption is both strong and reasonable that Cooke had been caught in some iflegal transaction, and having to flee th country, made it a point to die—on pa-per—of a broken heart, to stop pursuit, should, it be contemplated by those whom he had wronged. The letter carries upon its face the strongest evidence
